Dear [redacted]

This is in response to your letter of 3 July 1970 in which you refer to an article in a recent issue in the Detroit Free Press on the bombing of the CIA office in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Although I have not seen the article itself, I am quite certain that it refers to the bombing of a CIA office in an Ann Arbor, Michigan, office building in September 1968. It is my understanding that the persons charged with this act are now being tried.

I am informed that the small office in Ann Arbor was used by CIA personnel officers strictly for the purpose of interviewing college students in the Ann Arbor area who were interested in employment opportunities with CIA. It had nothing to do with the conduct of counter-espionage.

In view of your interest in the Free Press article, I am enclosing for your information a brochure prepared by the Central Intelligence Agency which discusses some of its functions, its position in the Government structure, and the oversight which is exercised over it. I would call your attention particularly to the excerpt from the National Security
